In concluding the records of the construction of the Hinsdale water system under Public Works Administration Project 4407, the following article is published with the permission of Mr. Arthur L. Shaw of the firm of Metcalf & Eddy, Boston, Mass., engineers in charge of the preliminary survey and construction, for the town of Hinsdale.

(Read Dec. 19, 1935)

Among the New England towns which took advantage of the first Federal Public Works Administration grants, under the provisions of Title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act of 1933, was Hinsdale, N. H. The fifteen hundred people who live and work in the central and more closely built part of Hinsdale depended upon springs and wells for their drinking water, and many found it necessary to carry water during protracted dry periods each year. For fire protection, they relied upon the Ashuelot River which flows through the village but which is unsuitable for drinking, because of pollution by sewage and industrial wastes from upstream towns and industries. Some of the mills lying along the river have fire pumps to serve their sprinkler systems, and certain of these pumps were connected with a cast-iron main laid in 1910 along the principal street of the village and having branches up the hillside and across the river into parts of the residential sections. In case of fire, word was sent to the mills, a pump was started, and in course of time, after the partly empty pipe had been filled, pressure became available. Aside from this supply, dependence had to be placed upon fire pumpers drawing directly from the river or from small wells in the outlying sections. In view of the obvious limitations of these facilities, the town authorities decided to undertake the construction of a new water supply system suitable for the usual domestic purposes as well as adequate for fire protection, taking advantage of the opportunity to obtain Federal aid.

Source of Supply. It was hoped that a suitable ground water supply could be found. The inhabitants of Hinsdale have long been accustomed to the colorless water of wells and springs, and would be critical of the color known to be present in the small streams most likely to be found available for a surface water supply. A thorough reconnaissance, however, including the driving of a total of about 400 ft. of test wells in various localities, at an expense of about $900, failed to discover an area where an adequate supply could be obtained by driven wells. In those localities where there was sufficient overburden to permit driven wells, the fine silty sand of the Connecticut River valley prevailed and yielded little or no water. Drilled wells were not considered feasible, and attention was therefore turned to surface water sources.

After careful consideration of several of the small streams in the vicinity of Hinsdale, it was finally decided to utilize Kilburn Brook which rises in the high hills north of the Village and which could be readily diverted to serve the village by gravity at a point about 8,000 ft. distant from the village and about 350 ft. above the river. Above this point, the brook flows through wooded and uninhabited territory. The drainage area above the point of diversion is about 2.71 sq. mi., and Kilburn Pond, a natural body of water covering about 21 acres, with a drainage area of about 1.63 sq. mi. and an elevation of about 470 ft. above the point of diversion, lent itself readily to development as an impounding reservoir.

Impounding Dam. At the outlet of Kilburn Pond a narrow rock gorge containing the remains of an ancient timber dam was utilized as a site for a new concrete dam, with spillway at El. 1040 or about 7.5 ft. above the natural level of the pond, increasing the flooded area to about 35 acres. Water from this reservoir will be drawn off and allowed to flow down the natural bed of the brook to the small intake reservoir at the point of diversion. The rate of draft will be regulated by gates as may be required to supplement the natural flow from the drainage area below the Kilburn Pond reservoir. About 70 m.g. of water can be stored above the level of the natural surface of Kilburn Pond, providing an estimated safe yield of at least 500,000 gal. per day at the point of diversion, or several times the initial requirements of the village which are estimated to be from 75,000 to 100,000 g.p.d.

In general, the banks of the reservoir are steep and rocky. As in most natural basins, there is some shallow flowage, mainly at the upper end, but on the whole the reservoir site is an excellent one.

The dam is about 35 ft. in length with a maximum depth to a cut-off in bed rock of about 15 ft. It was constructed of cyclopean concrete using fragments of ledge excavated for the footings. At the easterly end is located a small brick gate house inclosing the operating stands of the gates, 6 and 18 in. in diameter, by means of which the flow of water through the dam may be controlled. The spillway section is 27 ft. in length, the effective spillway being reduced to 26 ft. by a small pier in the center, which carries the foot bridge leading to the gate house. The freeboard between the spillway crest and the under side of the foot bridge is 4 ft. and a 3-ft. depth over the spillway will discharge a flood runoff of about 300 c.f.s. per square mile from the drainage area lying above the dam.

It was necessary for the contractor to locate and build a tote road from the highway to the dam site, a distance of approximately $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles. The dam was built in the dead of winter, and the cold at the altitude of 1,000 ft. above sea level was often intense. All materials for concrete, except cement, were pre-heated, and the contractor was permitted to use not over 2 lb. of calcium chloride per sack of cement dissolved in the mixing water. Fresh concrete was covered with a tent of tarpaulins and kept from freezing by the use of steam and by wood-burning stoves.

After the snow had left the ground, all trees and brush were removed from the area to be flooded, and all surface debris was taked up and burned. No attempt was made to grub the surface or strip the top soil from the flooded area. The work was completed, and storage of water commenced in time so that the reservoir filled to the crest of the spillway and overflowed in the early summer of 1935.

Intake Dam. The intake dam with its crest at El. 568 is thrown across Kilburn Brook upstream of its highest crossing of Chesterfield Road and just above the location of the purification plant, creating a small reservoir of about 300,000 gal.

capacity from which water can be diverted into the purification plant, or in case of need, drawn directly into the pipe line leading to the village. The dam has a spillway section about 45 ft. in length of cyclopean concrete founded on ledge about 13 ft. below the crest. Abutments and wings are of concrete and earth fill. In the north abutment is located the intake well from which the 8-in. cast-iron supply pipe is led through the dam. The well is protected by bar racks with a clear spacing of 1 in. behind which are double removable screens of heavy copper wire with 3 meshes to the inch. A 24-in. waste gate and conduit are also located in the north abutment.

The spillway is designed to pass a flood flow of 300 c.f.s. per square mile from the drainage area above the dam, with a depth of flow of 3 ft. A freeboard of 4 ft. is provided. The spillways of both the intake dam and the Kilburn Pond dam will be adequate for the run-off from rare floods such as that which occurred in parts of New Hampshire and Vermont in 1927.

Purification Plant. The color of the water of Kilburn Brook is high, being often over 100 p.p.m., and the pH often as low as 5.0, which would probably be aggressive toward pipes and services in the distribution system. The forest growth which covers the watershed is largely deciduous, and there is a heavy blanket of leaf mold on the ground which doubtless accounts for the color of the water, and probably for the low pH also. In order to reduce the color and to correct the pH, a mechanical filter plant was constructed just below the intake dam, with a capacity of 200,000 g. p. d.

It is expected that for the present and for some time to come, single-shift operation will suffice to provide all the filtered water required by the community. Draft from the standpipe near the village will supply the demand when the filter plant is shut down.

Water flows from the intake reservoir into a welded-steel mixing tank, 7 ft. in diameter, and with a water depth of 11 ft., the water level in which is controlled by a float valve on the inlet. Slow-moving motor-driven wood paddles gently agitate the contents of the tank, and preliminary and more violent mixing is obtained in a baffled spiral channel constructed on the inside of the tank just above the water surface, into which alum and soda ash are fed dry by manually-controlled automatic machines and down which the incoming raw water flows upon entering the tank.

From the bottom of the mixing tank, the treated water passes into two covered coagulation tanks of reinforced concrete, each of which is 14 ft. in width and 25 ft. in length, with an average water depth of 8.5 ft. A timber baffle divides each tank lengthwise into compartments 7 ft. in width. The water enters and leaves the tanks from the same end, passing around the baffles at the far ends of the tanks and being drawn off from the surface at the outlet end over the edges of weir boxes. Inlet, outlet and drainage gates are operated by gate stands mounted on the ends of the tanks, which project inside the building about 4 ft. to give convenient access to the tanks for inspection of the contents and control of the gates.

From the coagulation basins, the water flows into two mechanical filter units composed of cylindrical welded steel tanks 7 ft. in diameter with perforated cast-iron pipe strainer systems.

The water depth over the top of the sand is 5 ft., and the depth from the top of the sand to the center line of the strainer pipes is 4 ft. Influent, effluent, wash and drain valves are controlled manually from gate stands on the operating floor. Two 4-in. self-contained rate controllers limit the rate of filtration, and indicating loss-of-head and rate-of-flow gages are provided on the operating floor.

A small motor-driven centrifugal pump connected to the filtered water line delivers water to a 10,000-gal. welded-steel wash-water tank 12 ft. in diameter and 12 ft. high, located on the hillside near the plant, with its bottom 27 ft. above the wash-water troughs. Rate of washing is controlled by an 8-in. self-contained rate controller. A single wash-water trough is provided in each filter, with lip 30-in. above the sand surface.

Just before leaving the plant, and after passing through a meter, the water receives after-treatment with soda ash to establish a desirable pH before entering the distribution system. This chemical is applied by means of a manually-controlled dry-feed machine, from which the chemical is washed into an open riser on the main pipe by a small jet of water drawn from the wash water tank.

No filtered water basin is provided at the plant, the filters discharging directly into the pipe which leads to the village, and thence into the stand-pipe. The open riser referred to in the previous paragraph also serves to admit air to the discharge main to relieve a partial vacuum which would otherwise occur at times, owing to the fact that under certain circumstances the treatment plant is above the hydraulic gradient, and it is therefore necessary to avoid the danger of air-binding in the filters.

The filter house is constructed of red brick with heavy wood floor of mill-type construction; it has a wooden roof with asphalt shingles. Space is provided for the storage of chemicals on the main floor of the building, convenient to the chemical-feed machines. Chemicals are loaded into the hoppers of the chemical-feed machines by hand, only a small amount being required daily to keep the hoppers full. A small bench and sink are provided, together with apparatus for the simple and routine determinations which are necessary to follow the operation of the plant and to regulate the application of chemicals. The building is heated by an oil-fired hot-air furnace. Wash-water and sludge from the settling basins will be discharged directly into the brook below the plant.

Future extension to a total capacity of 300,000 g.p.d. is provided for in the design of the piping so as to permit the addition of one more filter unit by the extension of the filter wing. The mixing tank and the coagulation basins have sufficient capacity to serve 3 units of filters. Since the color and characteristics of the water of Kilburn Brook vary widely with the seasons and are affected by sudden fluctuations due to local rainfall and the like, it is expected that the required rates of application of chemicals will vary from time to time. The plant has not yet been in operation long enough to establish a final routine, but it has been clearly demonstrated that the process can reduce the color of the water to an acceptable degree. At present about $1\frac{1}{2}$ grains per gallon of alum and about 1 grain per gallon of soda ash are added to the raw water and about 0.6 grain per gallon of soda ash to the filtered water. The color has been reduced from 110 to 8 p.p.m. and the final pH brought up to about 7.5 or 8.

Supply Main. An 8-in. cast-iron supply main extends about 8,000 ft. from the filter plant to the village where it enters the distribution system. In case of need, as for example to make the storage in the intake reservoir available to supplement the storage in the standpipe at the village during extraordinary fire draft, or to quickly replenish the standpipe after depletion by a heavy fire demand, raw water from the intake reservoir can be drawn directly into the supply main by manipulation of valves outside the filter plant, so as to bypass the latter.

A pressure-regulating valve is installed on the supply main near the outskirts of the village to serve the double purpose of preventing the overflow of the standpipe and of protecting the village from the excess head of about 100 ft. which exists between the top of the standpipe and the intake works. The irregularities of the topography along the line of the supply main create several summits in the main as it descends from the purification plant to the village; these are equipped with automatic air valves for the relief of air which collects in the summits when admitted at the open riser in the filter plant or otherwise, and which would impair the capacity of the supply pipe if allowed to remain.

Distribution System. A covered standpipe 35 ft. in diameter and 35 ft. high, with a capacity of 250,000 gal. was built on the hillside above the village with its top at El. 455. This standpipe serves as a balancing reservoir and as a nearby source of supply to meet fire demands, or to provide for the ordinary requirements of the community while the filter plant is not running.

Cast-iron mains were laid in all the principal streets of the village and connected with the old cast-iron pipe already described in which pressure was previously available only at times of fire. The sizes of the water mains ranged from 6 to 12 in., and the total length of new pipe laid, including the supply main, was about 4 miles.

Gate valves were provided at all intersections so as to minimize the unprotected area when major repairs are necessary. In certain places along Brattleboro Road where it was desired to avoid cutting a comparatively new concrete pavement, a parallel 2-in. cement-lined wrought-iron pipe was laid to serve the houses on the side of the street opposite that in which the main pipe was located. Elsewhere a single pipe serves each street.

Sand-spun bell-and-spigot pipes hot-dipped in coal-tar varnish were used throughout the distribution system, except as previously noted, and in a few short dead-end streets where 2-in. cement-lined wrought-iron pipes were laid. House services from cast-iron mains consist of 3-4 in. brass corporation cocks, lead goose-necks and 1-in. cement-lined wrought-iron service pipes with lead-lined fittings and brass curb cocks. Corporation cocks were omitted on wrought-iron mains. All pipes were laid with 5-ft. cover.

The distribution system was designed with a view to providing a fire flow everywhere of at least 1,000 g.p.m. with a residual hydrant pressure of from 10 to 20 lb. per sq. in.; and 3,000 g.p.m. with a residual hydrant pressure of about 50 lb. per sq. in. in the high-value district in the center of the village. The static pressure when the standpipe is full is about 100 lb. per sq. in. in the center of the village, and about 40 lb. at the summit of Highland Avenue, the residential street nearest the standpipe.

All new hydrants have two standard hose connections and one pumper connection and are connected to the mains by 6-in. branches with auxiliary gate valves. Hydrants are spaced in general about 500 ft. apart. Practically all of the existing hydrants which were connected with the old main were without auxiliary gates; some of these were replaced by new hydrants, and all were provided with auxiliary gates.

All former connections between the old main and the mill fire-pumps were broken and plugged. The old pipes were found to contain large quantities of sand and gravel which had apparently accumulated from the river water over a period of years. Some of this material was fushed out, using the water wasted from the standpipe after the leakage test, but it was necessary to break into the old mains at several points and to pull through brushes of the type used for sewer cleaning, to dislodge some of the heavier gravel deposits.

Construction Costs. The construction costs of the Hinsdale water supply system were as follows, all work being done by contract under PWA regulations.

Contract			Cost of
No.	Contractor	Subdivision	Construction
1	O. W. Miller Co.	Kilburn Pond Dam	$9,200
2	James A. Munroe.	Intake dam, purification plant and tank foundations,	34,500
3	Davison Construction Co.	Distribution system,	74,500

4 Chicago Bridge & Iron Works. Standpipe and wash-water tank	7,900

Total,	$126,100

Contract 1 as has been stated, was built during the winter of 1934-35; the other three contracts were started in the early summer of 1935, and the entire project was practically completed in the fall of 1935.

The project was investigated by a local committee consisting of Prentiss W. Taylor, Chairman, Albert Krumenaker, Ezra B. Pike, Gustavus Smith and Robert A. Weeks. It was built under the direction of the same committee with the addition of Clarence D. Fay, and with Mr. Krumenaker as chairman. The technical studies and investigations, plans and specifications, and supervision of construction were undertaken by Metcalf & Eddy, Engineers.

The completed system has been turned over to a newly appointed Board of Water and Sewer Commissioners consisting of Robert A. Weeks, Chairman, Harold S. Garfield and Howard I. Streeter, who have appointed C. W. Harris to be superintendent and filter-plant operator.

Many users have already been connected with the system, and others are expected to apply as the advantages of an ample water supply under pressure become appreciated. The new water works were put to a severe practical test when fire broke out in a large mill of the Hinsdale Paper Company in the center of the town, in the early hours of November 9, 1935, only a short time after the standpipe had been filled and the mill fire-pumps disconnected. About a dozen fire streams were used from the new system, under excellent pressure, and with the aid of out-of-town pumpers supplying additional streams of water drawn from the river, the fire was brought under control in about two hours, doubtless preventing a general conflagration in the center of the town. The largest of the mill fire-pumps serving the old system was in the building where the fire originated and was inaccessible within a few minutes after the outbreak, so that but little water would have been available under the old regime. In the opinion of many citizens, this single demonstration justified the expense of the new system. It is not often that a new water supply system is subjected to a maximum demand so soon after inauguration, and this experience demonstrates the wisdom of liberality in design even in small communities.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT OF THE WATER AND SEWER WORKS

To the Water and Sewer Commissioners and Citizens of Hinsdale:

I herewith submit the following report.

We are working on Kilburn Brook by aid of WPA. The brook is being cleaned of wood and brush which will improve the water, also the water will reach the Purification Plant in shorter time.

The quantity of water used last August was 1,889,800 gallons. We did not draw very much water from Kilburn reservoir last summer. In fact the lowest drop at the crest of the dam was only two inches.

We have at present about 240 customers using town water

The public is cordially invited to visit the Purification Plant at any time. During the past year there were 190 guests from Maine to California who visited the plant.

I attended the New England Water Works association convention at Poland Springs, Me., and received a lot of valuable information. Also have attended some of the monthly water works school meetings in Boston.

In closing my report I want to thank the commissioners and selectmen for their co-operation in the past year.

Respectfully submitted,

CHARLES W. HARRIS,

Superintendent.

Office open every Monday night, 7 to 9.

I wish to thank the people, particularly the children, who donated nearly 300 toys for children in town, also to the Girl Scouts who have helped pack the toys. I am very grateful for the use of the truck and driver that helped me deliver the toys.

Once again I want to thank the people in town, the Superintendent of Schools, and the school teachers for their loyal cooperation in my work.

The circulation has remained the same for the last two years, still over that of 1929, which is considered standard.

At the present time the library subscribes to 33 magazines and newspapers and a few others are gifts. Each year those not used are dropped and others tried. This year the official Boy and Girl Scout publications have been added.

All political and religious books and magazines are gifts or government publications and cost the library nothing. We are the recipients of much foreign propaganda, at present most of it coming from Mexico, Russia and Japan.

The librarian attended the N. H. State Library Meeting at New London and the Mass. State Library meeting held in Springfield, Mass., and also the District meeting at Keene, N. H.

HEADMASTER'S REPORT HINSDALE HIGH SCHOOL

Hinsdale, N. H.,
Feb. 11, 1938.

To Mr. Wesley H. Douglass, superintendent of schools:

The annual report of Hinsdale High School is as Follows:

Enrollments:

Grade 12,	21
Grade 11,	22
Grade 10,	27
Grade 9,	28
Grade 8,	25
Grade 7,	29
Grade 6,	28

Total all pupils in building,	180

It is interesting to note that the present graduating class, which will probably graduate 20 pupils in June of this year, entered the 9th grade with an enrollment of 44, the 24 which dropped out having left for a various assortment of reasons. Most of those who were scholastically unable to keep on left on or before the completion of the Sophomore year. A large percentage of the rest of them left school because of a lack of courses to supply them with what they thought they needed.

The inadequacy of the courses now offered becomes increasingly evident in the number of pupils who are in need of high school vocational subjects who left school merely because there is little there that they can use. An increased offering in curriculum subjects would do much to rectify this condition.

The physical situation within the school house needs attention. The lighting facilities are far below normal requirement and are dangerous so far as the health of the individual pupil is concerned. Money spent in this way would save parents oculist's bills and pupil's headaches. There is a continuously growing need for a room of sufficient size to accommodate school socials and entertainments and various types of club work which may be connected with school children such as 4-H, Girl Scouts and Hobby Clubs of various kinds.

The school wishes to express its appreciation to all those who so graciously assisted in making the Style Show such a success last spring. That type of cooperation is the foundation of fine community spirit and group character amongst the young people of the town.

Respectfully submitted,

CLEON B. JOHNSON,

Headmaster.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT

To the School Board and Citizens of Hinsdale:

I have the honor to submit herewith my thirteenth annual report.

Buildings and Grounds: It did not seem wise to the voters a year ago to authorize the construction of a new school building so the School Board, following the suggestion made in this space last year, installed modern and sanitary plumbing in the toilets of both the Depot Street School and High School buildings. This is money well spent for this equipment can be installed in a new building which I trust will be built in the near future.

At the Depot Street building the old fence back of the building was replaced by a five-foot wire fence on steel posts set in cement. This was imperative in order to protect the children from the hazards of the river and steep embankment.

Last year I mentioned the poor lighting equipment. In order to protect the children's eyes from permanent injury, proper lighting is necessary on dark days and during the short days of the winter months. Investigation has shown that in some parts of some of the rooms, children do their studying with about one-fourth of the required light. The old lighting circuits are not always properly located and the fixtures are far from satisfactory. Under Article 8 of the warrant, the School Board gives you the opportunity to correct this evil and suggests an appropriation of $400.

The heating plant in the Depot Street building is fast giving out. I have been told that it has served for more than forty years. If that is correct, it has certainly outlived its usefulness. It is even difficult to get repairs for it. Article 9 of the warrant gives you the opportunity to replace the present old and worn out plant with a new and modern one. For this purpose, the School Board suggests an appropriation of $1,500.

When economic conditions are favorable, we need new school buildings. I believe a new elementary school is needed first and I hope it will be located on a plot of land with plenty of play space and removed from the hazards of street and river.

Teachers and Pupils: We suffered a rather serious mortality in the teaching staff this year, particularly in the High School. Matrimony claimed two, while more lucrative positions caused three to withdraw.

Miss Dorothy Emery, for two years teacher of Home Economics, was succeeded by Miss Dorothy Corcoran of Stoneham, Massachusetts, a graduate of Massachusetts State College in 1936.

Miss Dorothy Ephlin, teacher of Commerce, resigned to accept a position in Manchester, Connecticut, and her place is being filled by Miss Margaret Stanley of Waterbury, Vermont, a graduate of the University of Vermont, 1931, with six years experience in Randolph, Vermont, and Brandon, Vermont.

Miss Edith Petrie, teacher of English, resigned to accept a similar position in her home city, Danvers, Massachusetts. To fill this vacancy, Miss Elizabeth Tarney of Goffstown, New Hampshire, a graduate of Middlebury College, 1936, was elected.

Miss Mary Shea of the sixth grade resigned to accept a similar position in Portsmouth, New Hampshire. As her successor, the Board elected Miss Elizabeth MacLalan of Springfield, Massachusetts, a graduate of the State Teachers' College at Westfield, Massachusetts.

To fill the vacancy in the Monument District caused by the resignation of Miss Aldythe Taylor, Miss Anna Moran of Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts, a graduate of the State Teachers' College at Westfield, Massachusetts, was elected. Thus has the staff been recruited.

In these days of the increase in the cost of government, a brief statement in regard to school costs in Hinsdale as compared with the cost in New Hampshire may be of interest. The median per capita cost for educating an elementary pupil in New Hampshire in 1936-1937 was $77.16. In Hinsdale it was $67.22 or $9.94 less per pupil than the median for the State. In the State, the average cost per pupil in 1936-1937 for high school instruction was $76.63. In Hinsdale, it was $66.70 or $9.93 less than the State average. In this period of rapidly increasing taxes, we have operated schools on practically a stabilized budget and at a per pupil cost of nearly $10.00 less than the median or average for the State.

I call your attention to the financial and statistical tables and to the report of Headmaster Johnson. I concur with his feeling that we offer too narrow a curriculum, particularly for boys in the high school. We seriously need an added vocational curriculum. I have used on the outside cover a quotation from a recent article by Dr. E. W. Butterfield, Commissioner of Education for Connecticut, which expresses very forcibly this need for American education.

With grateful appreciation of the unvarying help I have received from the School Board, the teaching staff, and the Citizens of Hinsdale, I respectfully submit this report.

WESLEY H. DOUGLASS,
Superintendent of Schools.

FRED W. COLTON,
Town Clerk.

“It is probable that not one-fourth of our boys even in our industrial states will find their work in those skilled trades for which prolonged preparation is needed. More will run automatic machinery, drive trucks, distribute merchandise, care for our streets, and for public safety, or will render personal service. These need an education that recognizes that for most of us, this is a world not of books but of machines and people. In all junior high schools and senior high schools which are common schools, there should be industrial courses taken by not less than one-half of the boys. These are courses not to make artisans but to give confidence and interest to those who live in a new industrial civilization. The call is for general shops well taught, uncrowded, well equipped, and geared to the life of the community.”
